Peak is 7 PM — post-dinner Friday social. Evenings 6-9 PM stay strong all night.

Lunch (12-2 PM) is the dead zone — adults at work, kids in school. Push social specifically for early-window traffic if you want vendors to feel busy all day.

Vendor-happy target: 1,500-2,500 total guests · Standout night: 3,000+ · Aspirational: 5,000 (best night ever).

Rule-of-thumb distribution for a Friday-evening trade format. Calibrate against real door counts after the next 2-3 events to lock down the curve.

Per-table pricing — tiered model

Pricing scales with proven attendance from the previous show. Always ~5-6% of what a vendor typically clears — vendor keeps 94-95%. Cap: 30 tables.

Vendor tiers

New vendor (first 2 shows)

FREE

FREE the first 2 events. Prove the value before charging. New vendors who try us early lock in cheaper rates as we grow.

Smaller collection / half-table

50% OF FULL FEE

50% of full fee for a half-table (~3 feet). Right for vendors with lighter inventory or testing a new category.

Full table — standard

100% OF FULL FEE

6-foot table, black cloth, prime corridor spot. Standard rate for proven vendors at proven attendance levels.

Premium / corner / multi-table

150% OF FULL FEE

Higher-traffic corner or 2 tables side-by-side. For vendors who consistently sell out and want more real estate.

5,000 guests	$3,250	FREE	$88 $66	$175 $131	$262 $197	$3,930

Comparables for "fair market": LGS trade nights $0-50, pop-up markets $30-75, small card shows $50-150, Pokemon community events $75-200. Fair-market column pegged at ~5-6% of vendor sales. Our column = 25% less. We can sustain this because there's no venue rent.

Scaled pricing — 50-table cap

Once the corridor scales to 50 vendors. Same per-table rates as page 2 (we don't raise prices because the corridor is fuller) — just more tables sold per show, so TC revenue scales linearly.

Why this works: TC owns the building, corridor layout works without rent, drip campaign + photo recap already built. Operating cost per show is near zero. Undercutting by 25% positions TC as the cheapest serious card event in the area and locks in vendor loyalty as competitors charge $50-150 more for the same value.
